

Human Rights Defenders v. Guatemala

I. COMPLIANCE AND FOLLOW-UP ADDENDUM¹

November 22, 2016: The Court asked that the representative of the victims notify the State whether the victims intend to return to their residences within three months, so the State would know for which victims it would be obligated to guarantee adequate protection.²

The Court kept the proceedings open for monitoring compliance with the ordered reparations and required the State to issue a report regarding its compliance with the judgment by March 3, 2017.³

August 29, 2017: The State complied with its obligation to guarantee the victims with adequate security to return to their residences because the victims' representative informed the Court that the victims had no intentions of returning to the State.⁴ As such, the State is free from this obligation.⁵

The Court kept the proceedings open for monitoring compliance with the ordered reparations, and Guatemala must submit a report regarding its compliance with the judgement by January 12, 2018.⁶

1. Joseph Osgood, Author; John Flynn, Editor; Kim Barreto, Chief IACHR Editor; Cesare Romano, Faculty Advisor.

2. Human Rights Defender et al. v. Guatemala, Monitoring Compliance with Judgment, Order of the Court, Inter-Am. Ct. H.R. "Considering that," ¶ 9 (Nov. 22, 2016).

3. Id. "Resolves," ¶ 3.

4. Human Rights Defender et al. v. Guatemala, Monitoring Compliance with Judgment, Order of the Court, Inter-Am. Ct. H.R. "Considering that," ¶ 6 (Aug. 29, 2017).

5. Id.

6. Id. "Resolves," ¶ 2.